M	On January 3, 2013, this 04-02-1991 entry "Gun parts" was modified to "Component parts for guns" to make clear that the "parts" comprise components of a gun, which are definite and classified in the same class. Other "parts" are not in Class 13, such as gun scopes and telescopic gun sights in Class 9.		"10-2013"
A	These goods are attached to the barrel of the firearm, e.g., rifle, to line up the barrel with the sight or scope.		"10-2012"

M	09-30-10 Although these goods are referred to as “knobs” in the ID, these goods are functionally different from door knobs or cabinet knobs on which users would pull to cause the door or cabinet to open. Therefore, these goods are classified according to the function or purpose rather than material composition (door knobs and cabinet knobs are classified according to material composition under the Nice Agreement). 10-21-10 The wording “[not optical or telescopic]” was added to the 4-2-1991 entry “Adjusting knobs for gun sights” to avoid confusion with telescopic gun sights in Class 9. M	01/01/2015	GOODS	On 01-01-2015, this 04-02-1991 entry for “patterns for making clothes” was amended to the current entry to make clear the rationale for classification in Class 16, and in compliance with the Nice Classification, Tenth edition, version 2015, effective 01-01-2015.		"10-2015"
M	09/25/2014	GOODS	On 09-25-2014, this 06-01-2001 entry was changed from “Printed award certificates” to “Printed certificates for use as awards.” The term “awards” is indefinite and overbroad, and the nature of the awards must be indicated for both likelihood of confusion and classification purposes. In this case, the awards are in the nature of printed certificates, and “printed matter” appears in the Class 16 Heading. Therefore, “Printed certificates for use as awards” are in Class 16 based on the nature of the goods. The purpose of the printed certificates, “for use as awards,” does not determine classification of the goods.		"10-2014"

M	12/13/2012	GOODS	On 12-13-2012, the 04-02-1991 entry was transferred from Class 1 to Class 16. Adhesives in Class 1 are generally for industrial purposes, while adhesives in Class 16 are generally for stationery or household purposes. Therefore, adhesive cement for hobbyists is better suited in Class 16.		"10-2012"

M	01/01/2013	GOODS	On 1-1-2013, the 04-12-1999 entry was modified by inserting the word “rubber” to make clear the reason for classifying these goods in Class 17. However, effective January 1, 2013, the wording “Appliques [haberdashery]” appears in the Nice Alphabetical List in Class 26, and this new Alphabetical List entry encompasses clothing decorations such as fabric patches. Therefore, applicants who intend to apply for an Extension of Protection under the Madrid Protocol should consider limiting their use of the term “appliques” to Class 26 because including this term in other classes may result in a Notice of Irregularity. A	09/27/2007	GOODS	The word “appliques” is used in the U.S. marketplace to refer to a variety of goods in multiple classes. However, effective January 1, 2013, the wording “Appliques [haberdashery]” appears in the Nice Alphabetical List in Class 26, and this new Alphabetical List entry encompasses clothing decorations such as fabric patches. Therefore, applicants who intend to apply for an Extension of Protection under the Madrid Protocol should consider limiting their use of the term “appliques” to Class 26 because including this term in other classes may result in a Notice of Irregularity. A	The word “appliques” is used in the U.S. marketplace to refer to a variety of goods in multiple classes. However, effective January 1, 2013, the wording “Appliques [haberdashery]” appears in the Nice Alphabetical List in Class 26, and this new Alphabetical List entry encompasses clothing decorations such as fabric patches. Therefore, applicants who intend to apply for an Extension of Protection under the Madrid Protocol should consider limiting their use of the term “appliques” to Class 26 because including this term in other classes may result in a Notice of Irregularity. In this case, the awards are in the nature of plaques, and plaques are classified according to material composition under USPTO ID policy. M	12-17-09 - "being part of athletic garments" was added to the 1/15/09 entry to avoid confusion with compression sleeves that are not part of clothing and would be considered sports equipment in Class 28. On 01-01-2015, this 12-17-2009 entry for "clothing for athletic use, namely, padded elbow compression sleeves being part of an athletic garment" was modified to the current entry for clarity and to make clear the rationale for classification in Class 25. Compression articles sold as component parts of finished goods are classified in the same class as the finished good. TMEP §1402.05(a). Note that under NCL 10-2015, "compression garments" was added to Class 10 of the Nice Alphabetical List, and thus, are classified in Class 10 whether for medical or non-medical use.		"10-2015"
M	08-17-11 Most clothing items fall in class 25 except those that are adapted for a specific purpose or that serve a life-preserving function. Clothing that is adapted for a specific purpose is classified in the class related to that purpose. For example, "Dog clothing" is in Class 18 along with other pet-related items. Clothing that may prevent potentially life-threatening injury to the body, such as "Insulated clothing for protection against accident or injury," is in Class 9.		"07-1997"

However, generally, various fields of “wear” cover a wide range of clothing some of which may be commonly understood to be included in this terminology and some may not. Therefore, acceptable “wear” terms should be limited to those that are currently included in the Manual. Also, note that substitution of “clothing” for “wear” is not acceptable.		″09-2007″

M	On 01-01-13, this 04-02-1991 entry was modified by inserting the bracketed wording to clarify the nature of the goods and conform to the Nice Classification, Tenth edition, version 2013, effective 1-1-13. These goods are in the nature of clothing ornaments, such as a patch that is sewn on or otherwise applied to fabric or other material, and they are classified in Class 26 as clothing decorations.		"10-2013"

A	Although the word appliques is used in the U.S. marketplace to refer to a variety of goods in multiple classes, including clothing patches, decals, and vinyl or rubber adhesive strips and tapes, the wording Appliques [haberdashery] was added to the Nice Alphabetical List in Class 26, effective January 1, 2013, thereby limiting the meaning of the word appliques to clothing decorations, such as fabric patches, when it appears in International applications for registration. Therefore, applicants who intend to apply for an Extension of Protection under the Madrid Protocol should consider limiting their use of the term appliques to Class 26 because including this term in other classes may result in a Notice of Irregularity.
